Tommy nominated for Entrepreneur Award

Huge honor to be nominated for the Excellence in Entrepreneurship for the 20th annual Orange County Business Journal awards! The award is given for the recognition of an individual who exemplifies the American entrepreneurial spirit – through creativity and determination in the establishment and nurturing of business ventures.

Ford's Incredible And Barely Remembered 1982 Concept Car Had Pre-GPS SatNav And The First Integrated Video Game Console

The Intellivision console seems to have been built into the center armrest section in the back seat, complete with storage slots for the controllers, dual headphone jacks, and I think a place to store controller overlays. I suspect there was probably a place to store cartridges as well, even if I can't see it here.

Article: How Tommy Tallarico and the Terminator Revolutionized Video Game Music Forever

From a great article: "Some people may remember Tommy Tallarico from the G4 television series Judgment Day (also known as Reviews on the Run). Others may know him as the savvy Intellivision CEO gearing up for the Amico's upcoming launch. However, Tallarico is more important to the video game industry than people might think. With the help of The Terminator, Tommy Tallarico revolutionized video game music seemingly overnight."

Giving back to our Community, you can too!

Intellivision is so happy and honored to be a part of the Children's Hospital of Orange County (CHOC) fundraising event presented by Disneyland!

We are part of the Gamers For CHOC group which includes local companies such as Amazon Video Games, Riot Games, Square Enix, Humble Bundle, Obsidian Entertainment, inXile entertainment and others.

The group's mission is to rally the gaming community together to raise funds for CHOC as part of a year-long 30th anniversary celebration of its beloved annual 5k CHOC Walk fundraiser (this year transformed into Virtual CHOC Walk, presented by Disneyland Resort). This new fundraising program has one single goal – to raise funds for health care programs, education, and research at CHOC Children's Hospital of Orange County for kids and their families throughout Southern California (serving more than 250,000 children and families each year). CHOC is committed to improving the health and well-being of children through clinical expertise, advocacy, outreach, education, and research while aspiring to restore the magic of childhood to kids facing serious illness. The hospital is one of a select group of pediatric facilities nationwide to have been ranked for 2020-2021 as a best children's hospital by U.S. News & World Report.
